

manage a chaotic environment with your good nature and penchant for song. Your unique ability to manage up (with little or no knowledge on the part of those being managed) always adds a sweet hum to any environment, turning any place you land into a well-oiled machine.

finding a sole mate

This lady needs a song mate, one who will whistle a tune from 42nd Street under his breath and look quizzically up at you, daring you to name the tune on the spot. Your playfulness needs to be matched in pure fun — a bump on a log or shrinking violet is not for you.

invoking your inner stiletto

A draped top that shows off your shoulders is a great way to show off some sacred flesh. Just lovely.

WEDGIES

Wedge heels are a wonderful invention. They give you height and often are more cushy and comfortable than a sharp stiletto heel. They also add a bit of 1940s vintage glamour to any look.

open toe

Getting on your boyfriend's Vespa just outside a hip café in the coolest part of town, you are averse to a helmet since it will mess with your carefully coiffed '40s updo with cute bangs. You might be zipping off to a gig where a mix of vintage jazz and modern doo-wop is the main attraction. Or maybe you are in your 1965 Cadillac convertible on your way to the flea market. Wherever you are off to, you usually make a sassy entrance with your shiny open-toe heels that tilt you just a little forward, put an extra zing in your walk, and give onlookers a tiny peek of the toe cleavage.

completing the look

Skirts, mostly in the "New Look" style, full and waist-accentuating, show off your natural flair. Shirtwaists should figure prominently, veering toward a more classic '60s silhouette. If you're a curvaceous gal, you should accentuate your figure. If you're not entirely buxom, accenting the curviest parts of your body with a little dart and a tuck is perfect. With jeans, the bottoms should be rolled up, shirt elegantly tied around your waist. Lipstick should always be in a darker shade of red or violet and always be applied. (An Open-Toe Shoe girl with naked lips is not recommended.)
